

To Whom It May Concern:

In regards to the recent petition by certain banking establishments protesting the Indiana No Call List I would like to state the following.

1. Putting your own name on the list was done to avoid calls from places you do not want to speak with, including banks you did business with in the past. Obviously people obviously have left those banks for a reason.
2. Opening this to these banks is going to further open up opportunities for other establishments and threaten the whole reason for the list.
3. The people on the list have put their own names on this list for a reason. If they were interested in the services of these banking establishments, they would contact those establishments themselves.

I cannot tell you how important privacy is in this day of age. If I decide I want my privacy and ask not to be contacted, I expect that part of being in a Free America is that I have that right. I put my name on that list for a reason, to overturn that would be, in my view, invading my privacy.

Thank you,

Kari Horner
